

SOCIOLOGY

BOOKS

This catalogue lists all in-print and forthcoming titles in the field of Sociology. Books are arranged alphabetically by author within the following subject areas: African society, American society, Asian society, ethnic studies, general, Latin American society, religion, urban studies, and related interest. In the case of multiple authorship, a book is entered under the name of the first author appearing on the title page. Additional copies of this catalogue may be obtained by writing University of California Press, 2223 Fulton Street, Berkeley, California 94720.

United Kingdom, Europe, Middle East, and Africa
Your bookseller will be pleased to secure an examination copy of any title in this catalogue.

Please make requests on your official letterhead, including the name of the course, enrollment, and department. A card and invoice will accompany your order. If you "adopt" one of our books for course use (minimum order, ten copies) notify us on the card and keep the book as a complimentary desk copy. If you decide not to use the book, you may purchase it or return it for credit.

Contents

African Society	1
American Society	4
Asian Society	12
Ethnic Studies	25
General	28
Latin American Society	32
Religion	35
Urban Studies	36
Of Related Interest	39

BERKELEY	LOS ANGELES	SAN FRANCISCO
DAVIS	RIVERSIDE	SANTA BARBARA
IRVINE	SAN DIEGO	SANTA CRUZ

The Press publishes books in both the scientific and liberal arts fields. In addition, it issues scientific papers produced by the faculties of the University of California in series monographs covering most areas of study, and manages the publication of 13 scholarly journals. Editorial policies and final authority to publish are vested in an Editorial Committee, which represents the faculties of the nine University campuses.

University of California Press
2223 Fulton Street
Berkeley, California 94720

University of California Press
60 Lawrence Clark Powell Library
UCLA
Los Angeles, California 90024

Editorial and other services are also provided through a New York office:

University of California Press
25 West 45th Street
New York, New York 10036

University of California Press
2223 Fulton Street
Berkeley, California 94720

University of California Press
25 West 45th Street
New York, New York 10036

United Kingdom, Europe, Middle East, Africa—
University of California Press, Ltd., 2-4 Brook
Street, London, W 1Y 1AA, England.

Asia, Australasia, North and South America (except Mexico)—University of California Press, 2223 Fulton Street, Berkeley, California 94720, U.S.A.

México—Centro Interamericano de Libros Académicos (CILA), Sullivan 31-Bis, México 4, D.F.

University of California Press
2223 Fulton Street
Berkeley, California 94720

Please send me the following books. I understand that I am entitled to a ten per cent professional discount and that I may return any book(s) that I purchase for full credit if I am dissatisfied in any way.

Author	Title
--------	-------

This image shows a single sheet of white paper with horizontal blue or grey ruling lines. The lines are evenly spaced and run across the width of the page. There is no handwriting or other markings on the paper.

☐ Payment enclosed. (Publisher pays postage. Residents of California add 5% sales tax.)

☐ Please bill me. (Payment must accompany orders for $10.00 or less.)

Name _____

Address _____

City _____

State _____

Zip _____

SOCIOLOGY BOOKS

University of California Press
Berkeley, California 94720

004894
THEODOR H NELSON
458 W 20TH ST
NEW YORK NY 10011

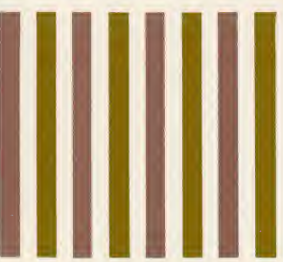

Nonprofit Org.
U.S. Postage PAID
Berkeley, Calif.
Permit No. 727

FIRST CLASS
Permit No. 18
Berkeley, Calif.

No Postage Stamp Necessary if Mailed in the United States

Postage will be paid by:

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA PRESS
2223 FULTON STREET
BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA 94720

van den Berghe, Pierre L. Ixil Country	32
———. South Africa	4
Vietnamese Anticolonialism, 1885-1925. Marr . .	19
Vogel, Ezra F. Japan's New Middle Class	24
Vose, Clement E. Caucasians Only	27
Wagatsuma, Hiroshi. Japan's Invisible Race	15
Weber, Eugen. The European Right	42
Weinstein, Fred. The Wish to Be Free	32
Wendt, Paul F. Housing Policy	39
The Wish to Be Free . Weinstein and Platt	32
Woman's Place . Epstein.	6
Wood, Forrest G. Black Scare	27
Working-Class Suburb . Berger	5
The Working Class Tories . Nordlinger	30
The World's Metropolitan Areas . International Urban Research	36
Yalman, Nur. Under the Bo Tree	24
Yang, C.K. Religion in Chinese Society	25

African Society

Modernizing Racial Domination

South Africa's Political Dynamics

Heribert Adam

Modernizing Racial Domination is a translation, expansion, and updating of a book first published in German under the title, Südafrika: Soziologie einer Rassengesellschaft, and described by some sociologists as the best available scholarly work on the political sociology of South Africa. It is a systematic sociological analysis of the politics of racial domination in South Africa. It provides a realistic and balanced assessment of South Africa based on five years of research and direct observation.

Forthcoming

Custom and Politics in Urban Africa

A Study of Hausa Migrants in Yoruba Towns

Abner Cohen

"An outstanding contribution by an experienced researcher (London) to the growing literature on sociocultural change carried out by anthropologists. It is particularly insightful regarding the increasingly important problem of inter-ethnic relations in developing areas. The thesis is that ethnicity must be understood as a political rather than a cultural phenomenon—in other words, as a basis for gaining and maintaining power, prestige, wealth, and security . . . Of particular interest to social scientists and those studying Africa or other developing areas."

—Choice

1969 LC: 68-55743 252 pages maps $5.50

Tradition and Transition in East Africa

Studies of the Tribal Factor in the Modern Era

Edited by P.H. Gulliver

"This effectively developed symposium includes several papers given at a 1966-1967 interdepartmental African seminar at the School of Oriental and African Studies of the University of London, supplemented by others written later . . . Each (contributor) is expert in his subject and knows Africa firsthand . . . the composite result is a well-rounded discussion of the traditional meaning of tribalism, its contemporary significance and forms, and its effects and influence on Africa today . . . This important work is indispensable for major, and useful for general, Africana collections."

—Library Journal

1969 LC: 78-84787 378 pages $7.00

African Law

Adaptation and Development

Edited by Hilda Kuper and Leo Kuper

"Each of these studies is in itself of considerable interest, even when taken in isolation . . . This series of essays by lawyers and sociologists will be of the greatest interest not merely to the followers of these disciplines, but to all those who are concerned with the development of the new nations of Africa."

—Journal of African History

1965 LC: 65-24589 275 pages $7.50

Pluralism in AfricaEdited by Leo Kuper and M. G. Smith

"The editors of this volume are internationally known and respected Africanists in the fields of anthropology and sociology. The contributors are also leading Africanists from several countries, including France, Great Britain, Uganda, and the United States, and are well recognized in the fields of linguistics, history, anthropology, sociology, and political science . . .

"The book's overall purpose is to examine the relevance of the sociological concepts of pluralism and the plural society to the understanding of African societies characterized by multiple ethnic groups. It focuses upon areas in which colonialism and/or relatively large white settler populations have contributed to a situation of conflict between groups . . .

"The book is useful to members of the concerned disciplines and to persons with an interest in the sociological concept of pluralism and in sociological theory more generally."

—World Affairs

1969 LC: 68-27682 546 pages $12.75

Neighbors and Nationals in an African City Ward

David Parkin

"Two social anthropologists, a sociologist, and a geographer have produced major studies of Kampala, Uganda, within the space of eighteen years . . . One

The Rise of Fascism. Carsten	40
Rogers, Andrei. Matrix Analysis of Interregional Population Growth and Distribution . .	30
Rogger, Hans. The European Right	42
Rose, Leo E. Democratic Innovations in Nepal . .	18
Roth, Guenther. Scholarship and Partisanship . .	29
Ruesch, Jurgen. Nonverbal Communication	42
Runciman, W.G. Relative Deprivation and Social Justice	31
The Samburu. Spencer	3
Scheffler, H.W. Choiseul Island Social Structure . .	21
Scholarship and Partisanship. Bendix and Roth . .	29
Schurmann, Franz. Ideology and Organization in Communist China	22
Schwartz, Mildred A. Public Opinion and Canadian Identity	10
Science and Morality in Medicine. Babbie	4
Scott, Mel. American City Planning	38
Sensei and His People. Sugihara and Plath	22
Smith, M.G., ed. Pluralism in Africa	2
———. Stratification in Grenada	34
Smith, Wallace F. Housing	38
Social Change in Modern India. Srinivas	22
Social Mobility in Industrial Society. Lipset and Bendix	8
Society in India. Mandelbaum	18
Sorel, Georges. The Illusions of Progress	31
South Africa. van den Berghe	4
Spencer, Paul. The Samburu	3
The Spoilage. Thomas and Nishimoto	12
Srinivas, M.N. Social Change in Modern India . .	22
Stark, Rodney. American Piety	11
Stratification in Grenada. Smith	34
Sugihara, Yoshie. Sensei and His People	22
Taub, Richard P. Bureaucrats Under Stress	23
The Teachings of Don Juan. Castaneda	25
tenBroek, Jacobus. Hope Deferred	11
———. et al. Prejudice, War and the Constitution . .	11
Thomas, Dorothy S. The Spoilage	12
To Comfort and to Challenge. Glock et al.	35
Townsend, James R. Political Participation in Communist China	23
Townsend, Joseph. A Dissertation on the Poor Laws	32
Tradition and Transition in East Africa. Gulliver, ed.	1
Under the Bo Tree, Yalman	24
Under the Ivi Tree. Belshaw	29
University Authority and the Student. Otten	10
The Unwelcome Immigrant. Miller	9
The Uses of Comparative Sociology. Andreski . .	28

Modernizing Racial Domination. Adam	1
Muscatine, Charles, chm. Education at Berkeley . .	9
Nagle, John David. The National Democratic Party	41
Nakane, Chie. Japanese Society	20
The National Democratic Party. Nagle.	41
The Nationalist Movement. Brown	14
Neighbors and Nationals in an African
City Ward. Parkin	2
Ness, Gayl D. Bureaucracy and Rural Development in Malaysia	20
The New Brahmins. Karve	18
Nishimoto, Richard S. The Spoilage.	12
Nonverbal Communication. Ruesch and Kees . .	42
Nordlinger, Eric A. The Working Class Tories . .	30
North China Villages. Gamble.	17
The Oakland Project.	37
O'Malley, C.D. The History of Medical Education	42
The Other Californians. Heizer and Almqvist. . . .	7
Otten, C. Michael. University Authority and the Student.	10
Parkin, David. Neighbors and Nationals in an African City Ward	2
Parsons, James J. Antioqueño Colonization in
Western Colombia	33
Petras, James. Politics and Social Forces in
Chilean Development	34
Plath, David W. The After Hours	21
Sensei and His People	22
Platt, Gerald M. The Wish to Be Free	32
Pluralism in Africa. Kuper and Smith, eds.	2
Political Institutions and Social Change in Continental Europe in the Nineteenth Century. Anderson and Anderson	39
Political Participation in Communist China.
Townsend	23
Politics and Social Change. Bailey	12
Politics and Social Forces in Chilean
Development. Petras	34
The Politics of Local Revenue. Meltsner	37
The Politics of the Barrios of Venezuela. Ray . .	34
Potter, Jack M. Capitalism and the Chinese
Peasant	21
Prejudice, War and the Constitution.
tenBroek et al.	11
Prussin, Labelle. Architecture in Northern Ghana	3
Public Opinion and Canadian Identity. Schwartz	10
Ray, Talton F. The Politics of the Barrios of
Venezuela	34
Relative Deprivation and Social Justice. Runciman	31
Religion in Chinese Society. Yang	25
Retraining the Work Force. Hoos	7
The Rhetoric of Religion. Burke	35

reason has been its unusual dual character as both the traditional capital of the Kingdom of Buganda, and a modern 'mushroom town' whose labor market has attracted an ethnically highly diverse population. Parkin's excellent study focuses, not upon the 'host' Buganda, but rather upon the 'migrants', and especially their most prominent component, the Luo of Kenya . . . Parkin's analysis is illustrated with well-chosen case studies . . . he has solved the analytic and research problems of African urban research better than any of his predecessors." —Annals

1969 LC: 68-55744 228 pages illustrations $6.00

Architecture in Northern Ghana

A Study of Forms and Functions

Labelle Prussin

In this book the author illustrates how architectural form and settlement patterns are structured by environment, economy and technology, and social, political, and religious relationships between people. Making maximum use of visual material, she studies six villages chosen to include the major traditional forms present in the area. She also discusses the effect of externally introduced historical factors on indigenous architectural forms.

1969 LC: 75-84789 120 pages
illustrations maps $8.95

The Samburu

A Study of Gerontocracy in a Nomadic Tribe

Paul Spencer

"In this well-written account of this patrilineal society, Spencer makes a detailed analysis of their social structure with emphasis on the functional relationship of their elaborate age-set system to other aspects of their social organization. This relationship is seen primarily as the mechanism which fosters and facilitates the practice of polygamy on the one hand and perpetuates exclusively among the elders the function of social control. It is this focus on status differentiation and stratification that presents the theme of the work: '...The strains exhibited by a gerontocracy and its relationship to the various social institutions.' "—Southwestern Social Science Quarterly

1965 LC: 65-21271 341 pages $6.50

South Africa

A Study in Conflict

Pierre L. van den Berghe

"White supremacy," says the author of this up-to-date analysis of South African society and politics, "is busily digging its own grave." Consensus about basic values is largely absent in South Africa, and the society is held together by a mixture of political coercion and economic exploitation. Although the repressive apparatus of the state now prevents conflicts over racial policies from erupting into open revolution, South Africa "seems inevitably headed for disintegration."

1967 LC: 65-14053 371 pages paper, $2.45

American Society

Science and Morality in Medicine

A Survey of Medical Educators

Earl R. Babbie

In an age of spectacular advances in medical science, marked by daring organ transplants and the development of artificial organs, there is a growing concern for the human aspect of medicine. Physicians and laymen alike have worried that, as medicine becomes more scientific, it also becomes less humane and that scientific physicians are too detached and impersonal in their care of patients. In particular, some critics have suggested that medical education in America has focused on the training of medical scientists rather than physicians committed to humane healing.

This book reports a 1965-1966 national survey of medical school faculty members in the clinical departments of medicine and pediatrics. Its purpose is to provide an initial examination of the effects of scientific perspectives on patient care. One implication of this study is that matters of medical morality and humane patient care must be dealt with directly if they are to be influenced in medical education. Simply deemphasizing science in medicine will not make the profession more humane or moral.

1970 LC: 71-92674 320 pages $7.50

- Heizer, Robert F. The Other Californians 7
- Hirschi, Travis. Causes of Delinquency 7
- The History of Medical Education.* O'Malley, ed. 42
- Hoos, Ida R. Retraining the Work Force 7
- Hope Deferred.* tenBroek and Matson 11
- Housing.* Smith 38
- Housing Policy.* Wendt 39
- Hyman et al. Applications of Methods of Evaluation 8
- Ideology and Organization in Communist China.* Schurmann 22
- The Illusions of Progress.* Sorel 31
- International Urban Research. The World's Metropolitan Areas 36
- Ixil Country.* Colby and van den Berghe 32
- Japan's Invisible Race.* DeVos and Wagatsuma . . 15
- Japan's New Middle Class.* Vogel 24
- Japanese Blue Collar.* Cole 14
- Japanese Society.* Nakane 20
- Joshi, Bhuwan L. Democratic Innovations in Nepal 18
- Kaplan, Marshall. The Community Builders 36
- Karve, D.D. The New Brahmins 18
- Kees, Weldon. Nonverbal Communication. 42
- Kitsuse, J.I. The Managed Casualty 5
- The Korean Minority in Japan.* Mitchell 19
- Kuper, Hilda, ed. African Law 2
- Kuper, Leo, ed. African Law 2
- . Pluralism in Africa 2
- Lambert, Jacques. Latin America 33
- Latin America.* Jacques Lambert 33
- Liang, Hsi-Huey. The Berlin Police Force in the Weimar Republic, 1918-1933 . . 41
- Lipset, Seymour Martin. Agrarian Socialism 8
- . Social Mobility in Industrial Society . . . 8
- Lohman, Joseph D. Cultural Patterns in Urban Schools 26
- The Managed Casualty.* Broom and Kitsuse 5
- Mandelbaum, David G. Society in India 18
- Marr, David G. Vietnamese Anticolonialism, 1885-1925 19
- Matrix Analysis of Interregional Population Growth and Distribution.* Rogers 30
- Matson, Floyd W. Hope Deferred 11
- Mayer, Adrian C. Caste and Kinship in Central India 19
- Meltsner, Arnold. The Politics of Local Revenue 37
- Military Organization and Society.* Andreski. . . . 28
- Miller, Stuart Creighton. The Unwelcome Immigrant 9
- Mitchell, Richard Hanks. The Korean Minority in Japan 19

Causes of Delinquency. Hirschi	7
Chandhuri, Nirad C. The Autobiography of an Unknown Indian	14
Choiseul Island Social Structure. Scheffler	21
The Christian Century in Japan, 1549-1650. Boxer	13
City Life in Japan. Dore	15
Clark, Margaret. Health in the Mexican-American Culture	5
The Cloak of Competence. Edgerton	6
Cohen, Abner. Custom and Politics in Urban Africa	1
Colby, Benjamin N. Ixil Country	32
Cole, Robert E. Japanese Blue Collar	14
The Community Builders. Eichler and Kaplan	36
Comparative Functionalism. Goldschmidt	30
Conrad, John P. Crime and Its Correction	5
Controlling London's Growth. Foley	36
The Correctional Community. Fenton et al., eds.	40
Crime and Its Correction. Conrad	5
Cultural Patterns in Urban Schools. Lohman	26
Custom and Politics in Urban Africa. Cohen	1
Democratic Innovations in Nepal. Joshi and Rose	18
DeVos, George. Japan's Invisible Race	15
A Dissertation on the Poor Laws. Townsend	32
Dore, R.P. City Life in Japan	15
———. Education in Tokugawa Japan	16
Eberhard, Wolfram. Guilt and Sin in Traditional China	16
Edgerton, Robert B. The Cloak of Competence	6
Education at Berkeley. Muscatine, chm.	9
Education in Tokugawa Japan. Dore	16
Eichler, Edward P. The Community Builders	36
Elite Conflict in a Plural Society. Broomfield	13
Epstein, Cynthia F. Woman's Place	6
The European Right. Rogger and Weber, eds.	42
Fenton et al. The Correctional Community	40
Foley, Donald L. Controlling London's Growth	36
Folsom, Kenneth E. Friends, Guests, and Colleagues	16
Friends, Guests, and Colleagues. Folsom	16
Gamble, Sidney D. North China Villages	17
The German Resistance to Hitler. Graml et al.	40
Gillion, Kenneth L. Ahmedabad	17
Glock, Charles Y. American Piety	11
———. et al. To Comfort and To Challenge	35
Goldschmidt, Walter. Comparative Functionalism	30
Graml et al. The German Resistance to Hitler	40
Guilt and Sin in Traditional China. Eberhard	16
Gulliver, P.H., ed. Tradition and Transition in East Africa	1
Health in the Mexican-American Culture. Clark	5

Working-Class Suburb

A Study of Auto Workers in Suburbia

Bennett M. Berger

"This is an important book; not only does it sketch the way of life of the contemporary factory worker, but it documents convincingly that a change of community and the community itself have little impact on the residents' behavior or aspirations . . . The book is short; its major points are well supported by interview data; the author's interpretations are clear and reasonable; and the volume is well written."

—Annals

1968 LC: 68-26522 143 pages cloth, $6.50
paper, $2.50

The Managed Casualty

The Japanese-American Family in World War II

Leonard Broom and J. I. Kitsuse

University of California Publications
in Culture and Society
Volume 6

1956 226 pages paper, $3.50

Health in the Mexican-American Culture

A Community Study, Second Edition

Margaret Clark

"A welcome addition to our limited knowledge of the largest Spanish-speaking group in American society. The major part of the book is devoted to a detailed descriptive account of patterns of community life, language and education, work and economics, religious participation, and family life."

—American Anthropologist

1970 LC: 71-106017 268 pages tables graphs cloth, $7.00
paper, $2.45

Crime and Its Correction

An International Survey of Attitudes and Practices

John P. Conrad

"There is no other book quite like this one . . . Conrad writes with a refreshing literary style; he writes with clear, original phrases that are neither verbose nor banal. His descriptions are at once exciting, illuminating and with the ring of truth . . . Scholars and administrators in corrections should be grateful that this decade has had such a witness as John Conrad, and that his testimony of our current transition from tradition to innovation is recorded in this very capably written book."

—American Journal of Correction

1965 LC: 65-13768 312 pages paper, $2.65

The Cloak of Competence

Stigma in the Lives of the Mentally Retarded

Robert B. Edgerton

"Robert Edgerton, anthropologist and research social scientist has, in his book The Cloak of Competence, provided a sensitive, insightful, and realistic view into the lives of the discharged mentally retarded. Too often today the man is submerged under the system, the therapeutic technique, or the goals of the sponsored program. It is refreshing to encounter a research effort in which the individual—his needs, feelings, assets, and limitations—are not lost in the statistic or the pedantic speculations of the author . . .

"This is a good book. It is a needed book. Its information may not solve the problems of the retarded, but it may go far in helping the professional and the lay person interested in retardation to focus on the areas in which the cloak of competence may be most thin."

—Mental Hygiene

1967 LC: 67-14116 233 pages $5.75

Woman's Place

Options and Limits in Professional Careers

Cynthia F. Epstein

Why, having fought to attain their right to participate equally with men in all social and economic spheres, have American women been so negligent in exploiting these rights? Why does it happen that, no matter what sphere of work women are hired for or select, like sediment in a wine bottle they settle to the bottom? And why do the best women—those in whom society has invested most heavily—underperform, underachieve, and underproduce? Why this is so and why it occurs is the focus of this book.

"There is more hard data, perception, cross-cultural comparison and historical grasp in this book than in any other tome on the Woman Question that I've ever seen."

—John Leonard, The New York Times

1970 LC: 75-98139 221 pages tables $6.95

Index

Index

- Adam, Heribert. Modernizing Racial Domination . . . 1
- African Law. Kuper and Kuper, eds. 2
- The After Hours. David W. Plath 21
- Agrarian Socialism. Lipset 8
- Ahmedabad. Gillion 17
- Almquist, Alan J. The Other Californians 7
- American City Planning. Scott 38
- American Piety. Stark and Glock. 11
- Anderson, Eugene N. Political Institutions and Social Change in Continental Europe in the Nineteenth Century 39
- Anderson, Pauline R. Political Institutions and Social Change in Continental Europe in the Nineteenth Century 39
- Andreski, Stanislaw. Military Organization and Society 28
- _____. The Uses of Comparative Sociology 28
- Antioqueño Colonization in Western Colombia. Parsons 33
- Applications of Methods of Evaluation. Hyman et al. 8
- Architecture in Northern Ghana. Prussin 3
- The Autobiography of an Unknown Indian. Chaudhuri 14
- Babbie, Earl R. Science and Morality in Medicine 4
- Bailey, F.G. Politics and Social Change. 12
- Belshaw, Cyril S. Under the Ivi Tree 29
- Bendix, Reinhard. Scholarship and Partisanship. 29
- _____. Social Mobility in Industrial Society. . . . 8
- Berger, Bennett M. Working-Class Suburb 5
- The Berlin Police Force in the Weimar Republic, 1918-1933. Liang 41
- Béteille, André. Caste, Class, and Power 12
- Black Scare. Wood 27
- Boxer, C.R. The Christian Century in Japan, 1549-1650 13
- Broom, Leonard. The Managed Casualty 5
- Broomfield, J.H. Elite Conflict in a Plural Society 13
- Brown, D. Mackenzie. The Nationalist Movement 14
- Bureaucracy and Rural Development in Malaysia. Ness 20
- Bureaucrats Under Stress. Taub 23
- Burke, Kenneth. The Rhetoric of Religion 35
- Capitalism and the Chinese Peasant. Potter 21
- Carsten, F.L. The Rise of Fascism 40
- Castaneda, Carlos. The Teachings of Don Juan . 25
- Caste and Kinship in Central India. Mayer 19
- Caste, Class, and Power. Béteille 12
- Caucasians Only. Vose 27

The History of Medical Education

Edited by C.D. O'Malley

This volume brings into focus for the first time the educational views of the great clinicians. The nineteen distinguished medical historians contributing to this study are: Fridolf Kudlien, Sami Hamarneh, Charles H. Talbot, C.D. O'Malley, Luigi Belloni, Charles Coury, Hans H. Simmer, G.A. Lindeboom, Erna Lesky, F.N.L. Poynter, L.R.C. Agnew, Wolfram Kock, M.D. Grmek, N.H. Keswani, Pierre Huard, John Z. Bowers, Francisco Guerra, W.F. Norwood, and John Field.

1970 LC: 72-85449 halftones line drawings
608 pages $20.00

The European Right

A Historical Profile

Edited by Hans Rogger and Eugen Weber

"A collaborative volume is always a tricky enterprise; easy to conceive, difficult to carry to a successful conclusion . . . The danger is particularly great when the chosen topic is the European Right . . . Confronted by these pitfalls, editors Rogger and Weber have pulled off the task with remarkable success . . . Every student of modern European affairs will find this collection informative and stimulating."

—Political Science Quarterly

"This collection of brilliant essays is a valuable guide for students of comparative politics, of political philosophy and of the history of ideas, as well as of modern European history. For political sociologists it is replete with pertinent hypotheses and empirical data."

—The Journal of Politics

1965 LC: 65-18562 589 pages cloth, $9.50
paper, $2.65

Nonverbal Communication

Notes on the Visual Perception of Human Relations

Jurgen Ruesch and Weldon Kees

"This avowedly unpretentious work is a most competent and evocative exposition of a much neglected phase of communication — the nonverbal. It is didactic in the treatment of its subject, but it is also, and refreshingly so, polemical in spirit. In effect, it argues that we listen too much and see too little . . . Specifically and categorically the authors demonstrate how much of communication can be effected and how much can be gained in seeing and in comprehending what is observable . . . indeed excellent."

—Contemporary Psychology

1956 LC: 55-11228 205 pages illustrations $8.95

The Other Californians

Robert F. Heizer and Alan J. Almquist

The Other Californians is a social history of four minority groups—Indians, Mexicans, Chinese, and Japanese—during the period from 1769, when the first of the 21 Franciscan missions was established, to 1924, when the Immigration Act was passed denying Orientals entry to the United States. Particular attention is focused on the treatment of Indians between 1850 and 1870, with special reference to kidnapping, sale, and forced labor of Indians as well their indenture to white masters. Also considered is how the minorities fared in the courts.

Forthcoming

Causes of Delinquency

Travis Hirschi

"The dust jacket of this book claims that it may mark a turning point in the study of deviancy. This claim is not overstated, for this is a large scale and significant contribution to delinquency theory and research . . . this is a highly significant piece of research which provides a serious challenge to the popular wisdom in criminology regarding delinquency."

—The Journal of Criminal Law, Criminology, and Police Science

"Hirschi offers a rigorous definition of delinquency suitable to quantitative research, surveys the social distribution of delinquency, and then examines one by one and with reference to rates and kinds of delinquency the important ties to society . . . He then shows how variation in the strength of these ties is linked to the commission of delinquent acts."

—Adolescence

1969 LC: 69-16508 309 pages tables $8.95

Retraining the Work Force

An Analysis of Current Experience

Ida R. Hoos

"Retraining programmes of varied kinds are proliferating rapidly as occupational requirements change with technological change. Most evaluations are politically-oriented or self-serving. Now Mrs. Hoos has presented an objective evaluation of programmes both private and public, judging their results in terms of job security and employment opportunity provided. The materials she deals with are restricted to the San Francisco area of the United States, but anyone professionally involved in training here would most certainly profit from a study of her book . . .

"This is not light reading, but for the specialist who may be seeking information about the experience of others to help him in his own planning, the book is a primary reference."

—Industrial Society

1967 LC: 67-11663 281 pages tables $7.25

Applications of Methods of Evaluation

Four Studies of the Encampment for Citizenship

Herbert H. Hyman, Charles R. Wright,

and Terence K. Hopkins

University of California Publications
in Culture and Society

Volume 7

1962 396 pages paper, $6.50

Agrarian Socialism

The Cooperative Commonwealth

Federation in Saskatchewan

A Study in Political Sociology

Seymour Martin Lipset

"Professor Lipset has presented an exemplary case study in his firsthand examination of the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation (CCF) in Saskatchewan. His study shows insight, circumspection and a competent collection of crucial and little-known data; above all, it asks pertinent questions which reach far beyond the special problem of Saskatchewan's experiment in 'Agrarian Socialism.' Here is an unexplored mine which, instead of offering a tiresome digging for irrelevant details, will eventually produce a rich ore, worthy of the effort of highly sophisticated researchers." —The American Political Science Review

1950 LC: 50-10524 315 pages tables $5.50

Social Mobility in Industrial Society

Seymour Martin Lipset and Reinhard Bendix

"The work is based partly upon primary research; but its major service is to draw together in an incisive comparative analysis the results of scattered investigations over the past quarter of a century in many parts of the world. The results are stimulating and enlightening."

—American Historical Review

those who maintain that Opposition thinking was identical to Hitler's in favoring the expansion of German frontiers, repression of the Jews, and an authoritarian regime, and that the attempt to assassinate Hitler on July 20, 1944, far from representing a repudiation of Hitler's program, was merely a desperate nationalistic attempt to salvage something from the wreckage. It is the merit of the four essays in this volume that they are written by historians, experts in their fields, who are concerned neither to praise nor to condemn, but to establish the reality. As Professor F.L. Carsten writes in the Introduction, "they shed new light on the subject, and above all they make no attempt to conceal or to whitewash."

1970 LC: 69-10591 281 pages $7.95

The Berlin Police Force in the Weimar Republic, 1918-1933

Hsi-Huey Liang

The records of the Berlin police during the Weimar Republic not only indicate the general state of affairs in Germany's capital during the twenties, but also, and more important, they tell us to what extent the Prussian police reforms provided an effective protection for the first German Republic. Focusing his attention on the political loyalty of the rank and file Berlin policeman, the author concludes that the hidden sympathy for the Hitler movement among a minority of police officials was in itself not fatal to the Weimar Republic. He suggests instead that a key factor may have been the naive faith of many public servants that political responsibilities were best left to politicians.

1970 LC: 74-85452 304 pages illustrations $8.95

The National Democratic Party

Right-Radicalism in the Federal Republic of Germany

John David Nagle

This study examines the National Democratic Party of Germany (NPD), its origins and stages of development, leadership, ideology, voter following, and future potential as a party. Neither a polemic nor an apology, Nagle's study shows that the NPD cannot be dismissed as a resurgence of Nazism—uniquely German—for right-radicalism is also rapidly expanding in other Western countries. He analyzes the probable effects of various proposals to suppress the NPD and suggests alternative policies for coping with the right-wing challenge.

1970 LC: 78-101340 300 pages $8.50

The Rise of FascismF.L. Carsten

"Professor Carsten surveys the major and minor European Fascist groups which flourished between the world wars, including such movements as were active in Romania, Austria, Hungary, Finland, Britain, and Belgium. In doing so, he has produced a useful, if brief, addition to the growing number of studies on this subject."

—Historian

"Carsten . . . describes the complexity of political events with admirable clarity, giving the reader the best scholarly description of European fascism available."

—American Historical Review

1967 LC: 67-21223 256 pages cloth, $6.50
paper, $2.25

The Correctional Community

An Introduction and Guide

Edited by Norman Fenton, Ernest G. Reimer, and Harry A. Wilmer

"Describes the 'correctional community' approach to the resocialization of inmates being used in California correctional institutions. Written by people involved with the program, the book was originally directed towards the training of staff readership audience. The authors have presented what might be called a 'cook-book' discussion of factors affecting the design, implementation, operation, and evaluation of 'correctional community' programs. Materials in the book are drawn from real experience and give the reader a clear and informative picture of 'correctional community' concepts and expose him to the major factors connected with its operation. Will be useful to persons interested in the field of corrections and would be good supplementary reading for administration of justice courses . . ."

—Choice

1967 LC: 67-14117 119 pages paper, $2.25

The German Resistance to Hitler

Hermann Graml, Hans Mommsen,
Hans-Joachim Reichhardt, and Ernst Wolf

The opposition to Hitler by a small minority of German men and women has long been the subject of emotional controversy. Those who wish to find a measure of sanity and decency amidst the mass hysteria and wickedness of Nazi Germany point to the Resistance as completely dissociated from the policies and philosophy of Nazism. On the other hand are "... Likely to be a basic reference source in the field of occupational mobility for years to come . . . Very few sociology books achieve so much either in scope or in depth, let alone doing both in a short space in readable English."

—Social Forces

1959 LC: 58-12829 309 pages tables cloth, $6.00
paper, $1.95

The Unwelcome Immigrant

The American Image of the Chinese,
1785-1882

Stuart Creighton Miller

The national decision to exclude the Chinese from the United States represented the first institutionalized departure from the melting-pot concept. Immigration historians, traditionally more interested in European arrivals, have given surprisingly little attention to this phenomenon. Moreover, they have all too willingly accepted the interpretation that sinophobia was peculiar to California before 1882, at which time the first Chinese exclusion laws were thrust upon a reluctant American majority as a result of political machinations.

Questioning this exclusive focus on California, Mr. Miller reconstructs the evolution of an unfavorable historical image of the Chinese that preceded them to the United States. In the process he provides a fresh perspective on present-day relations with China that should interest the general reader as keenly as the professional historian.

1969 LC: 76-81763 259 pages $6.95

Education at Berkeley

Report of the Select Committee on Education, Academic Senate,
University of California, Berkeley
Charles Muscatine, Chairman

"The report is a milestone to stand comparison with Harvard's 1945 report on 'General Education in a Free Society.'"

—Guardian

"The Committee's far-reaching recommendations would strengthen student-faculty rapport and allow greater opportunity for students to move in educational directions more compatible with their own individual needs and interests . . . What is striking about the recommendations is that they favor so many relatively new programs all moving in the direction of greater flexibility . . . The major thrust of the report is to build innovation into Berkeley's bureaucratic structure, to relate scholarship more closely to the needs of students, and — as the Committee's report puts it — 'to build bridges across that gulf between generations that separates students from their teachers.'" —Comparative Education Review

1968 LC: 66-63764 252 pages cloth, $6.50
paper, $1.95

University Authority and the Student

The Berkeley Experience

C. Michael Otten

Behind the slogans of chanting students and the arguments of their parents over reform versus suppression there is a long-standing debate, still unresolved, concerning governance of universities. Using the University of California, especially at Berkeley, as a historical case study, the author traces the origins of traditional student government and administrative paternalism. He shows that, despite the willingness of most students in former years to be co-opted into a more or less unified system of control, activist students never regarded the structure as legitimate. Thus, thirty years before the 1964 Free Speech Movement there was a Strike for Free Speech at Berkeley. Mr. Otten's study transcends the particular events at Berkeley and shows that the crisis of university authority is just one manifestation of a deepening rebellion against administrative centralization, and argues that organizational power must be democratized if conflict is not to become endemic.

1970 LC: 72-99485 240 pages
photographs $7.50

Public Opinion and Canadian Identity

Mildred A. Schwartz

"This excellent interdisciplinary study achieves what is claimed for it in the foreword, namely, that it provides 'a new dimension to historical and social science analysis.' Almost every social science was at times called upon for data, method, and philosophy... Painstaking and ingenious analysis, applied with great caution, and the employment of the data and techniques of numerous disciplines resulted in the guarded verdict that there is a lack of general consensus among all of the people of Canada, therefore, no real national identity."

—The Western Political Quarterly

1967 LC: 67-17693 263 pages tables $7.50

Housing Policy

The Search for Solutions

Paul F. Wendt

"Comparative factual analysis has long been needed in this field, and Dr. Wendt's pioneering study is both useful and illuminating, since he compares the post-war housing programs of selected countries in terms of their respective conditions, goals, methods, and achievements."

—Annals

"The book is particularly commendable for the candor of its views and the author's willingness to draw firm policy conclusions from his data and observations... Anyone concerned with housing either as a student, investigator or administrator should read this book..."

—The American Economic Review

1962 LC: 62-11497 283 pages $6.00

Of Related Interest

Political Institutions and Social Change in Continental Europe in the Nineteenth Century

Eugene N. and Pauline R. Anderson

"Few aspects of history have received more study than political change in Europe during 1815-1914. The systematic investigation of economic, social and institutional developments in the same period, however, has long been neglected; this comparative study by two veteran and authoritative authors truly breaks fresh ground. Their purpose is to demonstrate how political institutions both affected and reflected social change, their method that of analyzing developments in certain key areas: central, local, and provincial governments; bureaucracy; personal and political rights; the franchise; political parties; and parliamentary representation. The great powers receive primary attention, with less being given to the Scandinavian, East European, and Iberian states; Britain is excluded... the Andersons have tapped a wide range of secondary sources in English, French and German to produce a pioneering study that will interest political scientists and specialists in developing states as well as historians."

—Choice

1967 LC: 67-21432 451 pages $10.00

American City PlanningMel Scott

"Those who know the author would expect a fine product from such an indefatigable and meticulous researcher—we're not disappointed. To even undertake to write a history of planning in the United States during this century required courage and staying power. For all this we are indeed indebted to Mel Scott. He moves so naturally around the country, finding his relevant materials, that at times the reader may forget that weaving pieces of data into a significant whole is no mean undertaking. By bringing together pertinent graphics, key leaders, challenging concepts and foreign influences, Scott has given us a most comprehensive and articulate description of American urban development."

—National Civic Review

1969 LC: 70-84533 745 pages illustrations
$17.50

HousingThe Social and Economic Elements*Wallace F. Smith

Almost every society acknowledges that it has a "housing problem." This book, designed as a text for the emerging field of urban studies, suggests methods for analyzing such specific issues as: what proportion of a nation's resources should be devoted to housing? At what density should urban populations live? How should the government be involved in providing housing? The book is full of illuminations of basic economic concepts, such as the nature of price and the function of law of property and contract in creating housing markets, the nature of land speculation, economic base, and the investment multiplier, to name a few. One chapter is devoted to housing in the present-day United States, and although the author argues that no one formula is applicable for all cities, he suggests a list of principles for guidance of housing policy.

"This is the most impressive work in the field of housing to have been issued in recent years, and may in fact be the most important theoretical work on the subject."

—Chester Rapkin

1970 LC: 71-86372 544 pages illustrations
$12.95

American Piety: The Nature of Religious CommitmentVolume I of Patterns of Religious Commitment*Rodney Stark and Charles Y. Glock

"This is the first of a three-volume study of contemporary religious commitment in America . . . The first installment of the finished product suggests that it will constitute the most impressive and exhaustive body of empirical material on American religious behaviour yet to be compiled."

—American Journal of Sociology

1968 LC: 68-12792 230 pages tables cloth, $6.75
paper, $1.95

Prejudice, War and the ConstitutionCauses and Consequences of the*Evacuation of the Japanese Americans in World War II*Jacobus tenBroek, Edward N. Barnhart, and Floyd W. Matson

"As an objective record and analysis of the Japanese evacuation [it is] a significant contribution to our national life."

—American Sociological Review

"Makes very sad reading; but it should be read as a lesson in national humility."

—California Law Review

"It is likely to stand as the definitive work in its area."

—Annals

1954 LC: 54-11247 408 pages cloth, $7.50
paper, $2.25

Hope DeferredPublic Welfare and the Blind*Jacobus tenBroek and Floyd W. Matson

"This book is a history, discussion, and evaluation of public rehabilitation facilities and public attitudes toward the blind. Part I, entitled 'Heritage', develops the thesis that the blind are essentially normal people, with the exception of their physical disability . . . Part II, 'Security', is a detailed study of the development of public policy beginning in 1935—a year that marked a change in American attitudes toward public welfare . . . Part III, 'Opportunity', deals with vocational rehabilitation programs for the blind."

—Sociology and Social Research

1959 LC: 59-5147 272 pages $5.00

The Spoilage

Japanese-American Evacuation and Resettlement
During World War II

Dorothy S. Thomas and Richard S. Nishimoto

Day-by-day records of both social scientists and scores of participant-observers who lived in the detention camps provide a factual record of the evacuation, detention, and resettlement of the Japanese minority in the United States during the second World War.

1969 LC: 47-1448 388 pages paper, $2.45

Asian SocietyPolitics and Social Change

Orissa in 1959

F.G. Bailey

"Building on his earlier work in the Orissa highlands, Bailey examines the relationship between parliamentary democracy in Orissa and traditional forms of social and political organization. Whenever he uses terms such as these, he is careful to explain his exact meaning. His definitions are always precise and sensible, and by relating them where possible to local usage he has been able to make them unusually lively.

"Throughout the book he strays back and forth across interdisciplinary boundaries . . . It is an interesting attempt to combine the research methods of anthropology, political science, and history, and it has produced an exceptionally interesting book . . .

"It is an experiment which is a definite success, and it is to be hoped that others will follow his example."

—Journal of Asian Studies

1963 LC: 63-19473 241 pages cloth, $6.00
paper, $2.45

Caste, Class, and Power

Changing Patterns of Stratification in a Tanjore Village

André Bêteille

"An excellent study of an Indian village by a French sociologist, a work which combines the best in the traditions of field ethnology, political sociology, and economic anthropology. Bêteille shows how, for centuries in the village of Sripuram, power, prestige, and wealth overlapped in the context of the caste system and how, in the process of modernization, the three International Urban Research is a privately financed research and training organization concerned with the scientific study of urbanization throughout the world. One of its functions is the collection and standardization of basic data, particularly as they pertain to large cities. In addition, it analyzes data in order to answer basic scientific questions about cities and urbanization.

1959 LC: 59-5743 115 pages $3.00

The Oakland Project

Berkeley and Oakland are neighboring cities. Berkeley is a university center; Oakland a microcosm of urban America. This series of books reflects the efforts of students and scholars at Berkeley to develop a useful program of policy research and action in cooperation with Oakland city agencies. "We have tried to meet some of the city's most pressing analytical needs and also to make suggestions that can be implemented and, if successful, transferred to other urban areas . . . Our focus has expanded from a concentration on city budgeting to a wide range of substantive policies and questions of political process—revenue, police, personnel, federal aid, education, libraries, and the institutionalization of political change."

—Professor Aaron Wildavsky,
Director of The Oakland Project.

The first volume in the series

The Politics of Local Revenue

Arnold Meltsner

How Oakland, typical of many central cities, gets money for pressing social needs in the absence of significant state and federal support.

Forthcoming

The Community Builders

Edward P. Eichler and Marshall Kaplan

"The authors give an interesting history of the urban growth of America from colonial days to the piecemeal, unplanned growth of suburbia in this century—the target of the urban development critique."

—Journal of Town Planning Institute

"The book merits attention as an honest, thought-provoking treatment of a subject often confused by rhetoric."

—American Society of Planning Officials Newsletter

1967 LC: 67-13601 196 pages tables charts
photographs $6.95

Controlling London's Growth

Planning the Great Wen, 1940-1960

Donald L. Foley

"This valuable work is a sophisticated account of how a metropolitan plan—the Greater London plan, finished in 1944—was embodied into government policy and action. It goes further and describes how, in response to unforeseen social and economic changes, development policies were altered. As such it is one of the rare documentations of a continuing program on a metropolitan scale."

—American Society of Planning Officials

"He has written . . . a concise and penetrating analysis of post-war planning policy for London, and its effectiveness. This is a lucid, hawk-eyed summary."

—The Listener

1963 LC: 63-19958 224 pages $5.00

The World's Metropolitan Areas International Urban Research

The political boundaries of cities seldom coincide with their economic or demographic boundaries. Existing national statistics on cities are therefore frequently far from comparable because different methods and criteria were used to obtain them. To obtain a valid and comprehensive picture of one aspect of urbanization, International Urban Research has demarcated the boundaries of the world's metropolitan areas with 100,000 or more inhabitants and determined the population size of each.

have become separated as identifiably separate elements in the social life of the village. The book is an important landmark in the Marx-Weber-Mills argument about class and power. Well written and well organized, it should be useful in many classes in sociology, economics, and political science."

—Choice

1965 LC: 65-25628 238 pages $6.00

The Christian Century in Japan, 1549-1650

C.R. Boxer

"The leading Western authority on the history of Japan's relations with the Europeans and especially the Portuguese has made a major contribution to one of the most fascinating as well as significant one hundred year periods of Japanese history . . . A timely and valuable contribution not only to historical scholarship but to the study of international relations. It throws light on the internal political developments which are viewed through the eyes of Jesuit chroniclers. At the same time it reveals the interaction and interplay of forces and the clash of interests and intrigues among the European powers interested in Japan."

—Far Eastern Quarterly

1967 LC: 51-11017 535 pages map $11.00

Elite Conflict in a Plural Society

Twentieth-Century Bengal

J.H. Broomfield

"Broomfield has written a delightful, authoritative, and important analysis of a critical segment of Indian political development. He amply demonstrates his grasp of the essential elements of the times and locale and introduces several additional aspects of the pressures and limitations of the subject group not previously presented for consideration. The scope is bite-sized, germane, and thoroughly digestible. The style is lucid and most engaging . . . The technical execution of the book is excellent, with maps, charts, tables, and a fine index."

—Choice

1968 LC: 68-13822 349 pages maps tables $8.50

The Nationalist Movement

Indian Political Thought from

Ranade to Bhave

D. Mackenzie Brown

"Mr. Brown's new book provides a good introduction to a greater understanding of Indian political thought in its own milieu . . . certain to be widely used as collateral reading in introductory area courses and should be of interest to non-specialists as well."

—American Political Science Review

1961 LC: 61-11877 244 pages paper, $1.95

The Autobiography of an Unknown Indian

Nirad C. Chaudhuri

"Nirad C. Chaudhuri, India's most eminent writer on public affairs, tells sensitively of childhood and growing up in a village of East Bengal, and of the ceremonies which had such a vital bearing on his development as a youth. He writes fascinatingly of the Bengali Hindu elite in Calcutta, which was a center for this Western-influenced class. Because he is a man of broad interests — history, politics, literature, world affairs — he is able to give us a vivid picture of coming to maturity in an environment of social and political change."

—Independent-Press Telegram

1968 LC: 68-25418 506 pages cloth, $8.00
paper, $2.95

Japanese Blue Collar

The Changing Tradition

Robert E. Cole

This study probes the interaction between the universal aspects of the industrialization process and the Japanese culture and social structure by examining the role of tradition among Japanese blue-collar workers. The author's findings shed new light on the "convergence" theory that industrial societies become more alike as successively higher stages of industrialization are reached and as national identities play an increasingly restricted role. They also dispel the exaggerated stereotype of the loyal, submissive Japanese worker. In doing his research, the author spent four and one-half months as a blue-collar worker and lived for a year in a factory neighborhood.

1970 300 pages $7.50

Religion

The Rhetoric of Religion

Studies in Logology

Kenneth Burke

As Mr. Burke has commented: "If God is dead, God-terms are not." The present book, which is in a sense the Paradiso of the Burkean Comedy, is not a book about God but about man's relationships to the word "God"—how men use it, understand it, disagree about it and transform it. Using as texts the Book of Genesis and St. Augustine's Confessions, Mr. Burke examines the ways in which words about God persuade men toward certain attitudes and acts. The result is very much in the Burke tradition—a profound way of looking at language, at religion, and at man's ordering of the universe.

1970 LC: 70-89892 336 pages paper, $2.95

To Comfort and to Challenge

A Dilemma of the Contemporary Church

Charles Y. Glock, Benjamin B. Ringer, and Earl R. Babbie

"To Comfort and to Challenge proceeds to give as well substantiated and incisive an analysis as exists anywhere in the mounting library of protest now being directed at America's ecclesiastical establishment . . . The ninth chapter alone is worth the price of the entire book."

—Lester Kinsolving

1967 LC: 67-15560 268 pages tables $5.75

American Piety: The Nature of Religious Commitment

Volume 1 of Patterns of Religious Commitment

Rodney Stark and Charles Y. Glock

see American Society

Religion in Chinese Society

A Study of Contemporary Social Functions of Religion and Some of Their Historical Factors

C.K. Yang

see Asian Society

Politics and Social Forces in Chilean Development

James Petras

This is the first comprehensive social study of major social forces in conflict in Chilean politics. Mr. Petras finds that the much-admired democratic forms in Chile conceal an essentially exploitative substance; that parliamentary politics has served mainly the interests of party elites; that political coalitions of the working and middle classes have operated to the advantage of the middle class; and that the bureaucracy has reinforced elite rule. Petras interprets the growing radicalism among peasants and workers as an indication of a troublesome future for Chilean politics.

1969 LC: 69-15904 377 pages tables $8.50

The Politics of the Barrios of Venezuela

Talton F. Ray

"The slums of Venezuela and the roles played by slum dwellers in politics are the central points of this book. Ray, a former associate of ACCION in Venezuela, roughly categorizes the study into three parts: a description of the barrios and their general conditions; a well-documented analysis of barrio politics; and a detailed sketch of the role of the barrios in Venezuelan national politics . . . It is a scholarly, objective, exceptionally well written and readable book that should be required reading for every American in the Western Hemisphere." —Library Journal

1969 LC: 69-12844 211 pages illustrations $7.00

Stratification in Grenada

M.G. Smith

"In this fascinating study of elites on a small British Caribbean island, Professor M.G. Smith, a Jamaican-born, British-trained anthropologist, makes at least four significant contributions to social science. First, he subjects J. S. Furnivall's theory of the plural society to a rigorous empirical test. Second, he uses field data to challenge a critical portion of Talcott Parsons' theory of social action. Third, he adds to the cumulative literature of comparative stratification. Fourth, he contributes new data and new insights to the growing body of information about developing societies—a body of information which promises to free us from much of the ethnocentric heritage of sociology and which encourages us to relate theory and data from the various social sciences to one another."

—American Sociological Review

1965 LC: 65-17360 271 pages tables $7.00

Japan's Invisible Race

Caste in Culture and Personality

George DeVos and Hiroshi Wagatsuma

"A fascinating study of the nature of caste segregation and racist ideology in Japanese culture, with an interdisciplinary application of various social science research methods and perspectives. DeVos and Wagatsuma, an American and a Japanese, tackled this problem to shed some light on the comparative study of deviance and delinquency in Japan and the U.S. On the whole, it is a competent, exploratory study, using extensive interviews with Japan's caste minorities who are heavily concentrated in the Kansai area. Highly recommended to anyone interested in contemporary Japan and the problems and dilemmas posed in an industrial society."

—Choice

1966 LC: 66-16422 415 pages photographs
cloth, $8.75 paper, $3.95

City Life in Japan

A Study of a Tokyo Ward

R.P. Dore

"City Life in Japan is the first book of its kind, the first account of urban Japanese life by a scholar trained in the theory and methodology of modern social science, and it tells us a great deal about its subject . . .

"The author, expectably, has no major thesis to advocate, support, or defend; but these words are in no sense a condemnation. The book is highly valuable for precisely the reasons which prompted its writing. Dore does indeed give us a picture of Tokyo life, and he does place his ward in the broad context of Japanese society and culture . . . The author gives thoughtful, insightful concern throughout to the whys and wherefores of the circumstances he describes.

"As a note of caution, it should be added that economic conditions, at least, have changed greatly in Tokyo since 1951, but this fact does not detract from the merits of Dore's study, which will remain permanently valuable."

—American Anthropologist

1958 LC: 59-16060 472 pages photographs
cloth, $8.00 paper, $2.25

Education in Tokugawa JapanR.P. Dore

"There is no other book like it . . . Utilizing a remarkable amount of primary source material and discussing its implications with his customary grace and clarity, the author deals with the educational institutions for both samurai and commoner and the curricula of the bewildering variety of schools of Japan from the beginning of the 17th century through the Meiji Restoration in 1868."

—American Anthropologist

"Probably no Western social scientist has a more thorough understanding of Japanese language and culture. Dore combines this asset with wit, lucidity, careful writing and a very keen sense for sociological problems . . . It is a superb book."

—American Sociological Review

"For no Western country do we have so comprehensive and sophisticated an account of an educational system within a single volume. This monograph is equally a history of education, an essay in comparative education and a sociological analysis."

—The American Journal of Sociology

1965 LC: 65-1744 346 pages $6.00

Guilt and Sin in Traditional ChinaWolfram Eberhard

"Professor Wolfram Eberhard, known for studies in sociology, sinology and folklore, makes in Guilt and Sin in Traditional China an illuminating study of the concepts of sin and retribution and their changes in China through the ages in Buddhist scriptures, short stories and other forms of literature. It gives new insights into the Chinese mentality."

—Asian Student

1967 LC: 67-12297 141 pages $5.00

Friends, Guests, and Colleagues

The Mu-fu System in the Late

Ch'ing Period

Kenneth E. Folsom

"A brilliantly successful attempt to reveal the personal side of Chinese governmental mechanisms in the late 19th century, resting upon a careful analysis of the best Chinese sources. After describing the key role of personal relations in the history of Chinese government, Folsom explains the mu-fu system whereby privately hired experts advised provincial officials on technical and administrative matters well beyond the capacity of the officials' classical educations. He shows how the system worked in the careers

Colby and van den Berghe carefully analyze group and individual behavior in the contemporary society and institutional structures including politics, economics and religion. Finally the authors present the findings of their investigations of the complex process of change in ethnic membership and relations; here they broaden their scope to include the national society of Guatemala and Mesoamerica as a whole.

1969 LC: 68-16740 218 pages photographs $6.00

Latin America

Social Structures & Political

Institutions

Jacques Lambert

In this concise volume the author describes the social structures, economic systems, and political institutions of twenty Latin American countries. Much of the tension and anarchy that have characterized Latin American life since Independence he ascribes to uneven social development—the survival of archaic rural societies within political boundaries that have come to embrace advanced and increasingly self-conscious urban sectors.

"It is a volume of much insight and suggestion . . . one is forced to review his knowledge in new terms and consider hitherto unsuspected relations and connections . . . Lambert has written a brilliant volume. Furthermore, he has written in lucid prose."

—Hispanic American Historical Review

1969 LC: 67-29784 413 pages tables cloth, $10.00
paper, $3.25

Antioqueño Colonization in Western ColombiaJames J. Parsons

"Parsons has selected an area with which he is thoroughly familiar for illustrating the pioneer phenomenon in Latin America. Through careful historical research combined with intensive field investigations he presents the reader with a picture of the typical but complicated marginal Latin American region which has lain dormant since early colonial times until recently . . . His excellent analysis of pertinent human and physical geofactors brings to light the reasons for the continued underdevelopment of this part of Antioquia . . . The reader of this fascinating book will most certainly want it for his own collection . . . it is a fine piece of work."

—The Hispanic American Historical Review

1968 LC: 68-58002 233 pages 7 plates $6.50

A Dissertation on the Poor Laws

By a Well-Wisher to Mankind

Joseph Townsend

This short tract, published in 1786, was widely read, debated, reprinted in 1817, and then fell into unmerited obscurity. It is a polemic against the English system of poor relief, and against the Poor Laws which Townsend condemned as inimical to the welfare of mankind and society. It is significant because it anticipated by seventy-three years Darwin's theory of "survival of the fittest." Townsend's ideas indirectly led to Malthus' "principle" of population, which in turn sparked Darwin's biological theories.

1970 125 pages $5.00

The Wish to Be Free

Society, Psyche, and Value Change

Fred Weinstein and Gerald M. Platt

The Wish to Be Free is an important interpretation of modern revolutionary change. Focusing on personality, ideology, and social structure in psychoanalytic and sociological terms, the book links the French Enlightenment to Freud, political change to change in the family. By defining the changing pattern of father-son relationships in terms parallel to changing relationships to authority in politics, the authors have added an entirely novel dimension to discussions of revolutionary change, and have tied the present to the past in a highly instructive way.

"Significant and original. Among the very best attempts to integrate psychoanalytic theory with sociology and history." —Talcott Parsons

1969 LC: 71-83291 350 pages $8.50

Latin American SocietyIxil Country

A Plural Society in Highland Guatemala

Benjamin N. Colby and Pierre L. van den Berghe

Ixil Country begins with a description of the geographical and ecological setting of the Ixil region. Then the evolution of pluralism is sketched, beginning with the fragmentary accounts of the immediate impact of the Spanish Conquest upon the Ixil region and continuing into recent times.

of the two most important officials in 19th-century China, Tseng Kuo-fan and Li Hung-chang; the greater part of the book is an intensive study of Li's efforts to use the mu-fu system, hiring foreign experts, for his various 'self-strengthening' programs. The book should please the general reader as well as the China scholar; it is indispensable to an understanding of the collapse of traditional Chinese government."

—Choice

1968 LC: 67-26479 234 pages photographs $5.50

North China Villages

Social, Political, and Economic Activities before 1933

Sidney D. Gamble

"We are again greatly in Sidney Gamble's debt. In this volume he presents us with a great deal of material—the most readily available in English—on a considerable number and variety of Chinese villages as they existed under the regime of the Chinese Republic in the 1930s. The study is systematic and detailed about eleven villages but elaborated in terms of many from other areas." —The American Journal of Sociology

"The materials which make up the volume can no longer be duplicated through field research. Thus North China Villages is a welcome addition to our sparse sociological literature on pre-communist rural life." —The Journal of Asian Studies

1963 LC: 63-21616 347 pages tables $7.50

Ahmedabad

A Study in Indian Urban History

Kenneth L. Gillion

Professor Milton Singer, Department of Anthropology, University of Chicago, writes of the book: "This is not an esoteric study but one which has something important to say to a wide range of people interested in comparative urbanism and urban institutions—historians, political scientists, sociologists, anthropologists, economists, geographers, city planners, etc. Since Max Weber's work on the City, the contrast between western and non-western cities has become an article of faith among social scientists. Gillion's account of Ahmedabad shakes this faith and also challenges the far-reaching assertions so often made about the absence of civic institutions and a 'civic spirit' in non-western societies. This work reopens the whole question of westernization in India, and places it in a fresh perspective."

1968 LC: 68-25943 195 pages $7.00

Democratic Innovations in Nepal

A Case Study of Political Acculturation

Bhuwan L. Joshi and Leo E. Rose

"The most comprehensive study available on the government and politics of modern Nepal . . . The strains and stresses which the 'new states' are experiencing in the process of moving from 'traditional' to 'modern' forms, in the social, political, and economic realms, are well marked in this elaborate book . . . Almost all sources used are of primary origin."

—Choice

1966 LC: 66-14092 551 pages $10.75

The New Brahmins

Five Maharashtrian Families

D.D. Karve

"This is in many ways an unusual and absorbing book. Despite the title, The New Brahmins, the book is not a heavily-worded, sociological treatise on a newly emerging class . . . It is a collection of some carefully selected autobiographical and biographical accounts presented in excerpt form. The men who tell their stories are not known outside India; at least three of them are not known outside the linguistic region Maharashtra, to which they belong; they all wrote their stories in Marathi, so that the editor had not only to select but also to translate the excerpts. This combination of factors should have been enough to deter most editors from undertaking the task, but Professor Karve succeeds in doing a difficult job remarkably well. He has been able to bring out a book which is full of human and literary interest and is at the same time of great value to students of social change in India."

—International Social Work

1963 LC: 63-11389 303 pages $5.50

Society in India

Volume One: Continuity and Change

Volume Two: Change and Continuity

David G. Mandelbaum

This analysis of Indian society is the most comprehensive study done in recent times. In bringing together results of modern research, it reveals the regular patterns that underlie social relations throughout the country. It also outlines some of the principal social and regional variations. Mr. Mandelbaum views social relations in India as systems and shows that the society is not static but continually changing.

1970 LC: 70-99952 800 pages

cloth, $10.00 per volume paper, $3.25 per volume

"This book may well become a classic in the field and is primarily recommended for the demographer, economist, the planner with a technical interest in population analysis and projection . . ."

—American Society of Planning Officials

1968 LC: 68-11530 119 pages tables $5.00

Relative Deprivation and Social Justice

A Study of Attitudes to Social Inequality

in Twentieth-Century England

W.G. Runciman

"This volume reports a rare and surprisingly successful effort to unite the four skills of social-psychological theorist, historian, survey researcher, and philosopher-critic in a task which is shaped by a fundamentally sociological perspective. The author asks whether the sense of grievance in the populace is commensurate with the true extent of social justice in contemporary Britain . . ."

"One can only applaud this effort and the thoughtfulness with which the research was designed and carried out."

—American Sociological Review

1966 LC: 66-11437 338 pages $6.50

The Illusions of ProgressGeorges Sorel

Translated by John and Charlotte Stanley

Les Illusions du Progrès, first published in 1908, is one of Sorel's most enduring contributions to the sociology of politics. Speaking as a moral absolutist and as an enemy of the modern bourgeois state, Sorel lays bare the historical and economic origins of progress. He contends that the idea is not only an optimistic illusion but also a heavy weapon of bourgeois class interest. Historical progress as a doctrine and a habit of mind must, he argues, be eradicated before a total revolution can be mounted against the contemporary state. This treatise is more relevant than ever at this time, and is peculiarly interesting as reflecting the thought of a radical thinker who is yet not easily pigeon-holed as an extremist of the Left or Right.

1969 LC: 69-16511 222 pages $7.50

Comparative Functionalism

An Essay in Anthropological Theory

Walter Goldschmidt

"The theoretical pendulum of cultural anthropology has traditionally swung back and forth between the gospel of unlimited behavioral diversity and belief in the basic sameness of mankind. Professor Goldschmidt . . . has for a number of years defended the view that 'people are more alike than cultures.' He has accused his fellow anthropologists of overstating the plasticity of man and exaggerating the range of choices open to him in the various societies of the world. He would want them to pay more attention to what, in human societies is probable rather than just possible . . . This essay is a stimulating contribution to the controversy."

—Choice

1966 LC: 66-14412 150 pages $3.95

The Working Class Tories

Authority, Deference and Stable

Democracy

Eric A. Nordlinger

Why does one-third of the English working class vote for the Conservative Party and, in doing so, provide that party with half of its electoral strength? In seeking answers to this question, Mr. Nordlinger attempts to relate the workers' voting behavior to their preference for leaders of high social status, their acquiescence toward political authority, their normative acceptance of a hierarchical political system, their partisanship, and their attitudes toward class conflict and class solidarity. One of his surprising conclusions is that workers who vote for the Labour Party are as acquiescent toward political authority as are working-class Tories, and this despite the sharply different histories, traditions and public symbols of the two parties.

1967 LC: 67-19219 276 pages tables $8.95

Matrix Analysis of Interregional Population Growth and Distribution

Andrei Rogers

"The author demonstrates with data from California regions how the techniques of matrix algebra facilitate incorporation of interregional population migration into a population model . . . The aim of the monograph is the introduction of the spatial dimension of population into mathematical demography.

Vietnamese Anticolonialism, 1885-1925

David G. Marr

In discussing the origins and communication of anti-colonial symbols and myths in Vietnam, the author focuses on the Vietnamese sense of identity as a people. He argues that the Vietnamese identity had been under critical and sustained challenge since 1885 and that it began with the scholar-gentry but eventually spread to the miniscule bourgeoisie, the artisans, and, most important, to the bulk of the peasantry. Particular attention is devoted to the scholar-gentry since the process began with them and they continued to lead all significant anti-colonial efforts until at least 1920.

Forthcoming

Caste and Kinship in Central India

Adrian C. Mayer

"Prolonged residence in the village of Ramkheri has given Mr. Mayer a store of information concerning those real and imagined social groupings which so deeply influence the conduct of the rural Indian . . . Caste and Kinship is the most complete discussion of the workings of caste yet to be made available . . . Caste and Kinship should be one of the three or four essential reference works for anyone who mentions caste in India in his lectures or writings."

—American Sociological Review

1960 LC: 60-2076 295 pages cloth, $6.00
paper, $2.85The Korean Minority in Japan

Richard Hanks Mitchell

"... the author deftly handles his subject, a highly complex and problematical topic, with understanding and sympathy while sacrificing but little objectivity . . . lucidly written . . . this work is a modest but keenly perceptive historical survey of Japan's Korean minority problem."

—Annals

"Throughout the book the author clearly explains how Japanese discrimination combined with Korean unwillingness to become Japanized has limited the success of the assimilation process and has increased animosity between the two peoples. A commendable effort to occasionally consider such dynamics also in the framework of the cultural patterns and social structure of the two countries makes this study a significant contribution to the field of Japanese-Korean studies. It is to be hoped that this book will be of great help not only to the beginners in such studies but also to the social scientists who may find in it useful material for further explorations into the socio-cultural dynamics of Japanese and Korean peoples."

—Pacific Affairs

1967 LC: 67-18074 186 pages $5.75

Japanese Society

Chie Nakane

This book creates a structural image of Japanese society by synthesizing its major distinguishing features. The author focuses on the structural continuity of group dynamics that characterizes the entire spectrum of Japanese life. The most characteristic feature of Japanese social organization, she states, is the singularity of its relationships: an individual or a group always has a single distinctive relationship with another. This characteristic has made Japanese society unique and a sharp contrast to caste or class societies.

1970 LC: 71-100021 180 pages $5.00

Bureaucracy and Rural Development in Malaysia

Gayl D. Ness

"For an analysis which combines a firm grasp of the theory of organizations with a thorough attention to the social and political setting of development policies in a new nation, this study would be hard to match."

—Annals

"Mr. Ness' work is an attempt to understand Malaysia's experience in rural development. In it he displays a sensitivity to the country's problems, particularly the ethnic considerations involved in rural economic development. This work will be of interest not only to readers in Southeast Asia but also to others interested in the relationship of complex organizations and economic development."

—The Malayan Economic Review

1967 LC: 67-14115 257 pages tables $6.50

Under the Ivi Tree

Society and Economic Growth in Rural Fiji

Cyril S. Belshaw

"The Fijians appear to others in Fiji to fit very well the Western stereotype of a languid, cheerful, and improvident South Sea island people. The author, however, is able to show them as members of a part society set within a larger social system in which the Fijians, individually and as a people, are struggling hard to advance themselves . . . As a social anthropologist who has spent much of his professional career in the study of economic change among indigenous Pacific peoples, the author brings a very sharp eye for social patterning and a strong feel for the importance of detailed case material to his analysis of economic action among Fijians. At the same time, his control of the relevant economic factors and his attention to quantitative detail combine with his anthropological training to yield a magnificent record of economic change in what may loosely be called a 'peasant society.'"

—Annals

1964 LC: 65-7165 336 pages photographs tables $6.00

Scholarship and Partisanship

Essays on Max Weber

Reinhard Bendix and Guenther Roth

Today Max Weber appears to many younger rebels as the patron saint of "value-neutral" social science. Yet he too engaged in a furious generational rebellion of his own and in the end chose science as a vocation. These essays, many of which appear in print for the first time, deal with both Weber's substantive and methodological contributions as well as the relation of his life to his place in intellectual and political history. They also include Reinhard Bendix's Presidential Address to the American Sociological Association.

Forthcoming

Comparative Functionalism

An Essay in Anthropological Theory

Walter Goldschmidt

"The theoretical pendulum of cultural anthropology has traditionally swung back and forth between the gospel of unlimited behavioral diversity and belief in the basic sameness of mankind. Professor Goldschmidt . . . has for a number of years defended the view that 'people are more alike than cultures.' He has accused his fellow anthropologists of overstating the plasticity of man and exaggerating the range of choices open to him in the various societies of the world. He would want them to pay more attention to what, in human societies is probable rather than just possible . . . This essay is a stimulating contribution to the controversy."

—Choice

1966 LC: 66-14412 150 pages $3.95

The Working Class Tories

Authority, Deference and Stable

Democracy

Eric A. Nordlinger

Why does one-third of the English working class vote for the Conservative Party and, in doing so, provide that party with half of its electoral strength? In seeking answers to this question, Mr. Nordlinger attempts to relate the workers' voting behavior to their preference for leaders of high social status, their acquiescence toward political authority, their normative acceptance of a hierarchical political system, their partisanship, and their attitudes toward class conflict and class solidarity. One of his surprising conclusions is that workers who vote for the Labour Party are as acquiescent toward political authority as are working-class Tories, and this despite the sharply different histories, traditions and public symbols of the two parties.

1967 LC: 67-19219 276 pages tables $8.95

Matrix Analysis of Interregional Population Growth and Distribution

Andrei Rogers

"The author demonstrates with data from California regions how the techniques of matrix algebra facilitate incorporation of interregional population migration into a population model . . . The aim of the monograph is the introduction of the spatial dimension of population into mathematical demography.

Vietnamese Anticolonialism, 1885-1925

David G. Marr

In discussing the origins and communication of anti-colonial symbols and myths in Vietnam, the author focuses on the Vietnamese sense of identity as a people. He argues that the Vietnamese identity had been under critical and sustained challenge since 1885 and that it began with the scholar-gentry but eventually spread to the miniscule bourgeoisie, the artisans, and, most important, to the bulk of the peasantry. Particular attention is devoted to the scholar-gentry since the process began with them and they continued to lead all significant anti-colonial efforts until at least 1920.

Forthcoming

Caste and Kinship in Central India

Adrian C. Mayer

"Prolonged residence in the village of Ramkheri has given Mr. Mayer a store of information concerning those real and imagined social groupings which so deeply influence the conduct of the rural Indian . . . Caste and Kinship is the most complete discussion of the workings of caste yet to be made available . . . Caste and Kinship should be one of the three or four essential reference works for anyone who mentions caste in India in his lectures or writings."

—American Sociological Review

1960 LC: 60-2076 295 pages cloth, $6.00
paper, $2.85The Korean Minority in Japan

Richard Hanks Mitchell

"... the author deftly handles his subject, a highly complex and problematical topic, with understanding and sympathy while sacrificing but little objectivity . . . lucidly written . . . this work is a modest but keenly perceptive historical survey of Japan's Korean minority problem."

—Annals

"Throughout the book the author clearly explains how Japanese discrimination combined with Korean unwillingness to become Japanized has limited the success of the assimilation process and has increased animosity between the two peoples. A commendable effort to occasionally consider such dynamics also in the framework of the cultural patterns and social structure of the two countries makes this study a significant contribution to the field of Japanese-Korean studies. It is to be hoped that this book will be of great help not only to the beginners in such studies but also to the social scientists who may find in it useful material for further explorations into the socio-cultural dynamics of Japanese and Korean peoples."

—Pacific Affairs

1967 LC: 67-18074 186 pages $5.75

Japanese Society

Chie Nakane

This book creates a structural image of Japanese society by synthesizing its major distinguishing features. The author focuses on the structural continuity of group dynamics that characterizes the entire spectrum of Japanese life. The most characteristic feature of Japanese social organization, she states, is the singularity of its relationships: an individual or a group always has a single distinctive relationship with another. This characteristic has made Japanese society unique and a sharp contrast to caste or class societies.

1970 LC: 71-100021 180 pages $5.00

Bureaucracy and Rural Development in Malaysia

Gayl D. Ness

"For an analysis which combines a firm grasp of the theory of organizations with a thorough attention to the social and political setting of development policies in a new nation, this study would be hard to match."

—Annals

"Mr. Ness' work is an attempt to understand Malaysia's experience in rural development. In it he displays a sensitivity to the country's problems, particularly the ethnic considerations involved in rural economic development. This work will be of interest not only to readers in Southeast Asia but also to others interested in the relationship of complex organizations and economic development."

—The Malayan Economic Review

1967 LC: 67-14115 257 pages tables $6.50

Under the Ivi Tree

Society and Economic Growth in Rural Fiji

Cyril S. Belshaw

"The Fijians appear to others in Fiji to fit very well the Western stereotype of a languid, cheerful, and improvident South Sea island people. The author, however, is able to show them as members of a part society set within a larger social system in which the Fijians, individually and as a people, are struggling hard to advance themselves . . . As a social anthropologist who has spent much of his professional career in the study of economic change among indigenous Pacific peoples, the author brings a very sharp eye for social patterning and a strong feel for the importance of detailed case material to his analysis of economic action among Fijians. At the same time, his control of the relevant economic factors and his attention to quantitative detail combine with his anthropological training to yield a magnificent record of economic change in what may loosely be called a 'peasant society.'"

—Annals

1964 LC: 65-7165 336 pages photographs tables $6.00

Scholarship and Partisanship

Essays on Max Weber

Reinhard Bendix and Guenther Roth

Today Max Weber appears to many younger rebels as the patron saint of "value-neutral" social science. Yet he too engaged in a furious generational rebellion of his own and in the end chose science as a vocation. These essays, many of which appear in print for the first time, deal with both Weber's substantive and methodological contributions as well as the relation of his life to his place in intellectual and political history. They also include Reinhard Bendix's Presidential Address to the American Sociological Association.

Forthcoming

party, racist orators and pamphleteers tried to establish that the Negro was an inferior being. They appealed to "science," as they pretended to understand it and to the Bible, and their limited success was in part due to the latent prejudices of other white Americans. Other studies of race relations during the Civil War and Reconstruction have usually focused on the Negro and his painful adjustment to freedom, or on the radicals' use of him for political gain. Black Scare is about white men, not Negroes, revealing what is best described as the first "white backlash" in American history.

1968 LC: 68-26066 219 pages cloth, $6.00
paper, $2.45

General

Military Organization and Society

Stanislav Andreski

"An exciting, audacious, admirably written volume whose virtues seem particularly conspicuous in the light of the awesome neglect with which the subject-matter has been treated in contemporary American sociology. Unorthodox, deliberately controversial without being merely polemical, it wrestles with high level issues whose importance, one would have thought, was self-evident."

—Social Forces

1968 LC: 68-27161 238 pages charts cloth, $6.00
paper, $2.45

The Uses of Comparative Sociology

Stanislav Andreski

"Theoretical sophistication, historical sensitivity, and scholarly independence are leading characteristics of this recent volume by the author of Military Organization and Society . . .

"The author's open-ended framework is consistent with the need to epitomize cultural similarities and differences . . . Since the level of analysis falls between the interests of text and trade audiences, the volume should appeal to both the specialized reader and the literate layman."

—The American Journal of Sociology

1965 LC: 65-6167 383 pages cloth, $6.50
paper, $2.65

The After Hours

Modern Japan and the Search for Enjoyment

David W. Plath

"The rounds of life of different occupational and social categories form the central part of Mr. Plath's book . . . His descriptions emphasize the questions that arise in each style of life about the choice of alternatives, in work, in leisure activities, in education, in rearing children. This is done with a great density and subtlety of detail, and succeeds admirably. It reminds one sharply of how much the anthropologists have lost with their contemporary emphasis on formal analysis and how useful may still be a traditional ethnography, as a vivid and essential substitute for immediate personal experience and a base for understanding, even for a modern nation as accessible as Japan."

—The Journal of Asian Studies

1964 LC:64-16133 222 pages $5.00

Capitalism and the Chinese Peasant

Social and Economic Change in a Hong Kong Village

Jack M. Potter

"A study that is both absorbing and important . . . The book gives a fascinating insight into the remarkable economic progress that Hongkong has made since 1945. It is an important addition to the sociological and anthropological literature on China."

—Far Eastern Economic Review

"An important and stimulating book about the impact of the industrial and market economies of Hong Kong on a village community in the New Territories . . . this book will be of great value to anyone concerned with the general study of modernization in developing areas, and especially in China."

—Journal of Asian Studies

1968 LC: 68-10688 215 pages plates $5.75

Choiseul Island Social Structure

H.W. Scheffler

"Scheffler's book is a substantial and invaluable contribution both to the ethno-history and social anthropology of Melanesia, and to the theory of non-unilineal descent reckoning and structuring in general."

—Mankind

"More than a descriptive study—it is a significant contribution to the theory of non-unilineal structures."

—Oceania

1965 LC: 65-16482 322 pages $7.00

Ideology and Organization in Communist China

Second Edition

Franz Schurmann

"The first edition remains a near classic, widely recognized as scholarly and authoritative. The second edition, with its effort to treat events from 1961 to 1967, becomes an exciting experience—not just another book! . . . Here is a sociologist at his working best and the sociological method with its most challenging and frustrating aspects revealed."

—American Sociological Review

1968 LC: 68-26124 642 pages cloth, $12.50
paper, $4.95

Social Change in Modern India

M.N. Srinivas

"Professor Srinivas' book is a model of scholarship. His subject is significant, his style graceful, his attitude both modest and authoritative. He draws upon the diverse body of current research, using concepts that have become his intellectual trademark. Although he assumes a knowledgeable audience, his text is self-explanatory and will become a primary source for those who seek an introduction to Indian sociology. Since Srinivas' ideas have greatly influenced contemporary studies of Indian society, this elegant restatement of them will also become a major reference for ongoing research."

—American Anthropologist

1966 LC: 66-14413 194 pages cloth, $6.00
paper, $2.45

Sensei and His People

The Building of a Japanese Commune

Yoshie Sugihara and David W. Plath

"It is a very moving story of an . . . idealist, Japanese peasant style, and his devoted band of followers, as they come into conflict with the customs and hypocrisies of Japanese rural life. It is as fascinating as any novel, and told as it is by an unsophisticated 'true believer,' it has a ring of authenticity no novelist's pen could bring to it."

—Edwin O. Reischauer,

Former United States Ambassador to Japan

Sensei and His People

The Building of a Japanese Commune

Yoshie Sugihara and David W. Plath

see Asian Society

The Spoilage

Japanese-American Evacuation and

Resettlement During World War II

Dorothy S. Thomas and Richard S. Nishimoto

see American Society

Prejudice, War and the Constitution

Causes and Consequences of the Evacuation of the Japanese

Americans in World War II

Jacobus tenBroek, Edward N. Barnhart, and

Floyd W. Matson

see American Society

South Africa

A Study in Conflict

Pierre L. van den Berghe

see African Society

Caucasians Only

The Supreme Court, the NAACP, and the Restrictive Covenant Cases

Clement E. Vose

"Like a good teacher [Vose] raises, without actually asking, many basic questions about social and legal processes in a democratic society. So many of these questions are evoked by this book that the fact that it is the most penetrating analysis of restrictive covenants seems almost incidental."

—Annals

"It has added another dimension to the study of the judicial process . . . can serve as a model for further case investigations."

—Harvard Law Review

1959 LC: 59-8758 296 pages cloth, $7.50

paper, $2.95

Black Scare

The Racist Response to Emancipation and Reconstruction

Forrest G. Wood

There is a tendency to forget that the race issue, rather than slavery or abolitionism, dominated American political rhetoric in the years from 1862-1872. Led by the Copperhead faction of the Democratic

Health in the Mexican-American Culture

A Community Study, Second Edition

Margaret Clark

see American Society

Custom and Politics in Urban Africa

A Study of Hausa Migrants

in Yoruba Towns

Abner Cohen

see African Society

Japan's Invisible Race

Caste in Culture and Personality

George DeVos and Hiroshi Wagatsuma

see Asian Society

Cultural Patterns in Urban Schools

A Manual for Teachers, Counselors, and Administrators

Joseph D. Lohman

"Our concern in this book is with youth trapped within the confines of the urban ghetto. These young people have found our schools unsympathetic and alien places. It is our hope and our aim that this tragic situation be changed," comments Professor Lohman.

"Alienated from the general community, thrust into the subcultures of age, poverty, and race, many of these children become hostile, unregenerate, and desperate. A wide range of their problems is considered in Cultural Patterns in Urban Schools: conflicts between youth and adult authority, the limited opportunities open to these culturally differentiated children in U.S. society, and the difficulties schools have adapting a middle-class curriculum to the special needs of these children."

—CTA Journal

1967 LC: 67-21846 210 pages paper, $3.95

The Korean Minority in Japan

Richard Hanks Mitchell

see Asian Society

Neighbors and Nationals in an African City Ward

David Parkin

see African Society

"This is a splendid book. It is an excellent 'ethnographic biography.' It is an excellent study of a charismatic personality. It is an excellent 'village study.' Finally it is most entertaining reading . . . It is, above all else, a superlative example of the new form 'true novel'—the real life relationships of men and women and specifically of a soror mystica and her frater."

—Kenneth Rexroth

1969 LC: 69-15427 187 pages $5.95

Bureaucrats Under Stress

Administrators and Administration in an Indian State

Richard P. Taub

An efficient civil service is a prerequisite for the economic development of new, developing countries; yet many expert observers criticize the bureaucracy in these countries on grounds of incompetence and corruption. Few of the critics draw on careful empirical analysis, either of the administrative work involved or the workers' attitudes toward it. One of the merits of Mr. Taub's book is its firm base in firsthand study, involving interviews with administrators as well as the politicians, technicians and educators with whom they have to work, and examining both the attitudes that men bring to their jobs and the nature of their tasks. The author is able to identify the main sources of strain that affect Indian administrators, and to demonstrate how these strains interact and limit potential performance.

1969 LC: 68-58080 235 pages 28 tables $6.75

Political Participation in Communist China

James R. Townsend

"In this admirable study, Professor James R. Townsend examines the ways in which the ordinary workers and peasants, men and women, of contemporary China participate in the political process . . . Distinguished by clarity in presentation, lucid, concise analysis, and broad historical perspectives, this book is a most valuable contribution to the growing body of literature on Communist China."

—American Political Science Review

1967 LC: 67-11422 233 pages cloth, $6.50
paper, $2.25

Japan's New Middle Class
The Salary Man and His Family in a Tokyo Suburb
Ezra F. Vogel

"... the most humane and comprehensible descriptions of the famous Japanese customs yet to appear in print... This book is highly recommended to anthropologists who are concerned about just how to represent modern urban life ethnographically... to teachers who... must give courses on contemporary Japanese life, and are searching for a good text; and to anyone who is interested in social and cultural change in modern societies."

—American Anthropologist

"It is sound to say that this book is the most up-to-date field report on the urban Japanese family."

—Journal of Asian Studies

1963 LC: 63-21263 299 pages cloth, $6.50
paper, $2.25

Under the Bo Tree
Studies in Caste, Kinship, and Marriage in the Interior of Ceylon
Nur Yalman

"The writing is as simple as the complexity of the argument allows. It is nevertheless a book to be read backwards and forwards if it is to be fully appreciated. Whatever the issue of the debate to which it should give rise it is in its depth and detail a remarkable achievement from seventeen months' fieldwork."

—Man

"This book is an important contribution to the growing body of anthropological theory on kinship and marriage in South India and Ceylon which has made its appearance during the past decade and whose significance has yet to be fully appreciated... This book is bound to stimulate much interest and discussion."

—Royal Central Asian Society

"Yalman's book is a distinguished work that should be on the shelf of any methodologically minded social anthropologist, irrespective of his area commitment."

—American Anthropologist

1967 LC: 67-11939 406 pages tables glossary
$8.50

Religion in Chinese Society

A Study of Contemporary Social Functions of Religion and
Some of Their Historical Factors

C.K. Yang

"This major work is a searching sociological analysis of Chinese religious behavior... Mr. Yang applies refreshing sociological techniques and insights to his analysis of religion in Chinese society, including Communist society. It is a book that differs from many others in its findings, but it does so with convincing authority."

—Saturday Review

"He strikes a pleasant balance between descriptive, factual material and conclusions. He is completely successful in his endeavor to be analytical and to deal with ideas. As a result, his book is mature, stimulating, and enlightening indeed. Since it is also excellently written, it is a pleasure to read."

—Annals

1961 LC: 61-7520 473 pages tables cloth, $9.50
paper, $3.45

Ethnic Studies

Modernizing Racial Domination

South Africa's Political Dynamics

Heribert Adam

see African Society

The Teachings of Don Juan

A Yaqui Way of Knowledge

Carlos Castaneda

"An extraordinary book... a remarkable experience, a jarring and total immersion into a wholly alien but irresistibly fascinating sensibility. This is no ethnology text, with charts and footnotes, but the happenings themselves, told with such immediacy, honesty and clarity that the reader becomes a part of them, sharing Castaneda's exultations and bafflements and terrors; traveling with him—terribly alone—that road that must be taken to become 'a man of knowledge.'"

—Los Angeles Times

1968 LC: 68-17303 196 pages $5.95